able to get away in time. But other passersby managed to run away.

One of those who got away with light injuries was Vera Dersie, 23, of Tel Aviv, who was taking her uncle and aunt, Alexander and Maria Strakosky, visitors from Rumania, to a tour of the Old City. Interviewed at Shaare Zedek Hospital, she said: "I have never been in a synagogue in my life, but I will go to one tonight." Her uncle and aunt refused to speak to reporters.

Mrs. Miriam Assad, 23, who was being treated for splinter wounds in her thigh and whose year-old son, Shmuel, was having his hand bandaged, said that she heard a hissing sound and a small noise before the main explosion. She said the noise allowed her to move away from the explosion.

Health Minister Victor Shemtov visited the injured at Shaare Zedek Hospital two hours after the explosion. Ya'acov Tsaur, 58, who suffered leg injuries, told the minister that he felt fine and was not dismayed by the incident.

The radio gave the names of the injured and the degree of their injury during its 2 p.m. broadcast. Mrs. Naomi Hadari, who received light leg injuries, was worried that her husband, Rabbi Yeshayahu Hadari — who as head of Yeshivat Hakotel was yesterday visiting students serving in the army — should hear of her injury. She said the radio was explaining to her that since many people have no telephone, that was the best way of notifying the next of kin. The names of the girl soldiers, including that of the severely injured girl who was taken to Hadassah Hospital, were not released.

Since the grenade apparently exploded on the ground, most of the injured were hit in the legs and lower part of their body. One of the Arab children hospitalized at the Hospice in the Old City, however, was hit between the eyes by a splinter. His condition is described as medium.

The fact that only one Arab adult was injured, led David Amoyal, 21, a soldier who was at a nearby tailor shop when the explosion occurred, to speculate that the perpetrators had warned Arab bystanders.

Court holds up ruling on mental state of Libyan plane hijacker

TEL AVIV. — Mahmoud al-Toumi, the 37-year-old Libyan who hijacked a Lebanese airliner to Israel last August, should not be tried if, in the view of the Court, the law disqualifies persons whose "responsibility for their actions is limited." This was the opinion given by the psychiatric panel in the District Court here yesterday, where al-Toumi admitted all charges against him. The Court decided to postpone its ruling on al-Toumi's fitness to stand trial until next Tuesday.

Al-Toumi forced the pilot of a Middle East Airlines Boeing en route from Benghazi to Beirut last August 16 to land at Lod Airport. On landing, he surrendered his two pistols to Israeli security men with a struggle, claiming that all he wanted was "to make friends for Israel." He was remanded, and a psychiatric panel under Prof. Zvi Winnik was set up to establish his fitness to stand trial.

Yesterday's hearing, postponed from October 22 because of the war, was largely given over to Prof. Winnik's report. He noted al-Toumi's long history of psychological insecurity, describing him as a man who had always found it difficult to relate to his family, society as a whole or his work. His father was a doctor and his mother a nurse.

Prof. Winnik told the Court, "All this caused him to turn to political activity, and, as a youth, he resolved to 'fight corruption, oppression and imperialism.' Before he turned 20, the idea of bringing about peace between Israel and the Arabs began to obsess him — he saw the Arab countries' devotion to the destruction of Israel as diverting their attention from these real ills facing the Arab world. So he decided to do something about it.

The idea of hijacking an aircraft to Israel occurred to al-Toumi as early as 1962, Prof. Winnik said. On his many flights to Egypt as a sales representative he always sat right in the front of the plane and planned his strategy. His chance finally came last August, when he boarded the MEA Boeing.

The Court then asked Prof. Winnik if he thought al-Toumi was motivated by an "irrepressible urge." He could not answer the question, but said that while al-Toumi knew what he was doing at the time of the hijacking, he had no doubt that "he acted in accordance with a pathological train of thought."

"Al-Toumi was motivated by an impulse that was difficult to control. If Israeli law were to disqualify such persons from standing trial, I would recommend to the Court that al-Toumi not be brought to trial," Prof. Winnik concluded.

Al-Toumi's attorney, Yitzhak Adar, then asked the Court to consider his client as having acted out of "mental sickness." The present attorney, Victoria Ostrovsky-Cohen, agreed that al-Toumi was disturbed, but noted that the Law does not recognize "limited responsibility" as disqualifying a suspect from standing trial.

The Court decided to postpone its ruling on the question until next Tuesday.

House stands in silence to honour B-G

The Knesset stood in silence yesterday to mark the memory of Israel's first Prime Minister, David Ben-Gurion, who was buried at Sde Boker kibbutz in the Negev on Monday afternoon.

The House will hold a memorial session next Monday, after the seven days of silence mourning are over. The bereaved family and national figures will attend.

Speaker Israel Yeshayahu, in a brief two-minute address, said that David Ben-Gurion was a personality who lit the way for his own generation and would cast light for future generations. He was recognized, respected and admired by Jews, and by friends of the Jews, the world over.

The Herzliya Municipality yesterday voted unanimously to rename its main thoroughfare after David Ben-Gurion. The street, Rehov Ha'avoda, runs from Ramat Hasharon to the centre of Herzliya.

The dedication is to take place on Yom Ha'atzmaut, Monday.

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Finnish Ambassador Alvar von Heiroth, yesterday extended his condolences and those of his colleagues on Ben-Gurion's death to Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

A message of condolences was received yesterday by Ben-Gurion's daughter, Dr. Renana Leshem, from Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard of Holland.

Snap-shot fiend comes into his own

The camera-toting American tourist is often the butt of a not always good-natured jest. But not Daniel Andron, a visitor from New York, who toured the wards of Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital with his Polaroid camera yesterday taking instant colour snaps of wounded soldiers and, to their delight, presenting each of them with a memento of their stay.

Mr. Andron, who is a leader of the United Jewish Appeal in New York, took more than a hundred pictures yesterday and today doing the rounds again today.

Druse officials buy war bonds

HAIFA. — The three members of the Druse Spiritual Authority and the two kads of the Druse religious court here yesterday contributed a month's salary each to the Voluntary War Loan.

They asked the Religious Affairs Ministry to have their contributions deducted in one lump sum — not in six monthly payments, as is usual for civil servants.

One of the two kads, Sheikh Nur-e-Din Halabi, added a personal contribution of IL2,500 in cash. He has been making over his pay cheques to the defence establishment since he was appointed to the court three years ago.

Sephardic Jews urge greater efforts for Israel
The Jewish Federation of Sephardic Jews is calling on its members to contribute to double their contribution for Israel, to encourage immigration and to help explain to their governments Israel's stand in its present struggle. The Federation also calls on the Israel Government and on foreign governments to work for the removal of Jews in Arab countries, including North Africa.

These resolutions were taken at a recent emergency meeting of the Federation in Jerusalem presided over by the organization's president, Mr. Nissim Goren of Geneva.

Mr. Elyahu Elyashar, of Jerusalem, vice-president of the Federation, said that per capita, Sephardic Jews abroad gave more money for Israel than their Ashkenazi brothers. Sephardic constitute about eight per cent of Diaspora Jewry, he said.

THREE ORGANIZED groups of tourists totalling 224 persons arrived here yesterday. The largest comprised 121 visitors from Scandinavia, with two others consisting of pilgrims from the U.S.

Radio-TV licence fees combined, go into effect

The new amendment combining radio and television licence fees went into effect yesterday, and Broadcasting Authority officials held a press conference in Jerusalem to explain how it works.

The combined fee for next year is IL125, payable in April and May. Aharon Mita, Deputy Director-General of the Authority, said, "It will cover the fiscal year of April-March 1974-75, instead of the calendar year of January-December 1974. Therefore there will be a 25 per cent surcharge to cover January-March 1974, which is not paid for by the current licence, making the total payment due IL155.50."

Broken down, the IL125 fee comes to IL95 for a television set and IL30 for a radio.

Mr. Mita estimated that 100,000 TV set owners failed to pay their fees last year. The 450,000 who did paid in some IL50m. Of the 850,000 radio sets in the country, no fees were paid for 250,000, he said.

According to the new amendment, all defaulters have been given 60 days' grace as of yesterday to pay their fees without penalty. After this period, defaulters will be liable to a IL500 fine. Retailers who fail to report sales of TV or radio sets will be liable to a IL1,000 fine. (Itm)

Dutch drivers kept waiting in queue

Jerusalem Post Economic Correspondent
Complaints by Dutch truck drivers that they are kept waiting for hours on end in port were confirmed yesterday by the transport authorities.

Truckers insist that the Dutch take their turn in the queue — although these foreign vehicles are on lease and cost foreign currency. Mr. Yosef Levy, of the Transport Ministry, told The Jerusalem Post last night, "We are trying to persuade our local truckers to give the guests from Holland priority," he added.

Asked why there should be any waiting at all, Mr. Levy stressed that delays are caused by citrus deliveries — which take time to put on board ship. And half the Dutch lorries are on the citrus detail.

There is also a holdup in the handling of containers. Not enough trucks are available for this specialized job, according to Yitzhak Binovich, assistant manager of Ashdod port. As a consequence, the Asasi Company pointed out to The Post that they have to make up their containers inside the port, instead of in the factory area — and that aggravates overcrowding.

Specialized vehicles in general, such as fuel tankers, are often lacking. As to all-purpose lorries, the situation has much improved in the last week or two. The Gabor Company comments: "We manage."

Relatedly, Arab trucks from the administered areas are being utilized (they are not mobilized by the Army).

Mr. Binovich explains: "We couldn't use them before, owing to the war. Both sides were reluctant — the Arab drivers and the Jewish customers. Now the Arabs are cooperating fully, and earning a lot of money."

26 TORAH SCROLLS and hundreds of tefillin, donated by Hachinuch-Hapoel Hamizrachi in the U.S., were presented to the Chief Rabbi by the Soldiers Welfare Association in Jerusalem yesterday for distribution to soldiers at the front.

Wounded commando describes one of Sharon's missions KAETZELE'S PRIVATE WAR

By ZEEV SCHUL, Jerusalem Post Military Reporter

BEILINSON HOSPITAL. — "My name is Ya'acov Katz, but everybody calls me Kaetzle," the young soldier said. His bed had been moved next to the window of a plastic surgery ward, overlooking the lawns and tall green trees below. This is as close as he is going to get to the outdoors for many months.

"I intend to get well," Kaetzle says. "Not only that — I'm going to save this game leg of mine so they take me back into my old unit. I owe it to my friends who didn't make it. I made a pledge."

The pledge means a lot to 22-year-old Ya'acov. More than to most.

Ya'acov, a Yeshiva student from Bnei Brak, was on his pre-discharge leave when the October 6 war broke out. Before that he had been a deputy company commander with the rank of Neutnant in one of the elite reconnaissance units attached to the Southern Command.

"I was getting ready to drive to Jerusalem that Friday, the eve of Yom Kippur. I wanted to spend the holiday praying in Yeshivat Harav Kook, where my brother is studying. Only a few hours before my departure I received a phone call, ordering me back to my unit."

"I had already signed out of my unit, turned in all my equipment. I had planned to study at the Yeshiva. No, I don't think I'm cut out to be a Rabbi. But I wanted to gather some values before making up my mind. Maybe I'll teach delinquent youth, or join a mo'avah. Do something worthwhile, you know."

He continued, "When I showed up at the camp they still had my equipment. It was all there, waiting for me. My motorcycle, rifle and all the rest of my stuff."

"We still didn't know what was going on. But I had a feeling this was going to be a war of mitzva (religious duty) and that it would release me, partially, from many of the holy day's restrictions. I prayed in the vehicle that carried us southwards the following day, the Day of

"Kaetzle" in his hospital bed.

Atonement. We rejoined our battalion. I fasted, although I learned later that I shouldn't have, under the circumstances.

"We were hoping that the fighting would be a local thing and that we'd soon be returning home."

"But about two o'clock that day — Saturday — all hell broke loose. The skies were filled with Egyptian planes, swooping down at us from all directions. A camp behind us became one blazing inferno. We could hear the sound of artillery fire from across the Canal, although we were beyond its reach, and we prepared to defend our installations in the area. Each time the Egyptian planes came over I would jump into a half-track and open fire at them with a swivel-mounted machine gun. I didn't hit any of their planes. But at least I fired back."

"I don't know what prevented them (the Egyptians) from overrunning our lines at that stage. There were plenty of Israeli tanks, but they fought back, contesting every inch of ground. But the Egyptians could have advanced."

"Sunday Arak Sharon (a divisional commander) came down to join us. There were a number of us, myself included, who didn't have any clearly defined tasks. There weren't enough troops for us all to command, so I rounded up a small number of officers, nine of them, including two Neutnant colonels, former battalion commanders. We also 'borrowed' a half-track and a couple of jeeps and organized ourselves into a special task force."

"We spent the first few days roaming around near the Egyptian lines, picking up their artillery spotters and Egyptian pilots who had bailed out and were trying to regain their positions. We captured four of them, some high-ranking officers, including one full colonel and a major. The other two were captains."

"It was all sand dunes. From time to time we found ourselves sandwiched in between the two armies, and we were often under artillery fire. But we were an agile unit and always managed to evade them in good time. We filed reports on Egyptian spearheads. We reported directly to Arak."

"Six of us were in the half-track," Ya'acov continued. "Three more were on foot. And it was out of action. So the remaining six had to keep on doing what they were doing. I don't think many of those Egyptians got away. My unit mopped them up. But two more were wounded. There were only four of them left."

"They came over to me. Later they told me that after taking one look at my leg they decided I wouldn't live more than five minutes. Since the area was still under fire, they couldn't call in a helicopter. So they bound me to a tank and got me back to an evacuation point."

"They were supposed to have landed somewhere near the line where the tanks of the two armies were shuffling it out. Well, we found them all right. About 6 a.m. on 10 of them, well, due to it. We called in a couple of tanks to support us with their guns. Then we charged — the nine of us, in two jeeps and my half-track. But they scored with a bazooka. A bull's eye, killing the driver and another man."

"Me — I was lucky. They say it doesn't pay to stick one's neck out,

"Kaetzle explains that he is not the only member of a group of three friends who volunteered for the reconnaissance unit. "We went to the same school (Kfar Ha-roeh) and graduated together. One of them had intended to go to yeshiva after completing his army service. But he changed his mind during the war. He told me just before he died that since so many officers had been killed, it was to him to contribute his person to plug the gap. Since he was killed I intend, if I can, to fill for him."

Ya'acov Katz — a handsome young man with deep-set, dark blue eyes — is the unchallenged favourite of the ward. He has been lying in his bed for weeks now on his back. He has no complaints, and only on wish — could I bring him a cassette recording of "My Fair Lady?"

I said I would.

"But be sure you don't bring it on Saturday. I wouldn't want you to violate the Sabbath."

I promised I wouldn't, that I would bring it on Sunday. My Fair Lady for Kaetzle on Sunday.

AN OUTBREAK of diarrhoea was reported in the Tel Aviv quarters of Kiyat Tivon this week, affecting several dozen residents. Mekorot has been asked to check the water supply for possible causes.

According to "Aviation Week," while the Mirage and the Israeli-built Barak (a copy of the Mirage) equipped with an American jet engine) served as an aerial umbrella, the Phantoms were used against ground targets.

The paper also insists that Israel is in possession of a ground-to-ground missile equipped with a nuclear warhead, and says it bases this statement on "Western observers."

Without giving exact figures, the paper claims the Israel Air Force was outnumbered four to one, and was able to achieve its successes with the help of an extremely efficient centralized command which enabled it to dispatch aircraft against Syria or Egypt at will.

The paper also claims the Egyptians launched a total of 25 Kelt missiles against various targets, but only five of them hit their targets, including two ground installations and one supply base in Sinai.

Work places which normally use imported materials are sometimes not operating fully, because part of their labour force is in the army. Such firms have no use for the items when they come. "There's at least 1,000 tons of cement outside this building in the port, with no takers," he pointed out.

There were ready answers to several other criticisms. Citrus carriers go back from port, empty, because generally the packing stations to which they are returning are only 30 kms. away, and there are no industrial areas in the vicinity to be served.

One port official observed that the Government's sugar and flour stores inland close at 2 p.m. The spokesman of the Commerce Ministry denied that allegation emphatically: "Whenever deliveries are expected, the stores remain open — during all the daylight hours."

He said that while the country needed a national coalition headed by Menachem Begin, "there are enough forces within the Likud on the municipal level to manage this city on their own." (Itm)

Speaking at a news conference here, Mr. Lahat, who was recently discharged from active reserve duty, also criticized Mayor Yehoshua Rabinowitz's administration for disbanding the Municipal Emergency Authority. He said not enough had been done in the area of bomb shelters, fire defence and public transportation.

Asked if he would be prepared to serve as a deputy mayor in an Alignment-Likud municipal coalition after the elections, Mr. Lahat said, "No. I would make a bad deputy."

but in my case I suppose it did. I was standing up, exposed, firing my machinegun. If I hadn't been that missile would have gone right through me. As it was, it hit in the thigh.

"Are you squeamish? See? The can't even put a bandage on it yet and the bone is still broken. It's even all there. But they'll put a piece of metal or something."

(I looked up at the open-end canopy that covered Kaetzle's lower body. Where his left hip should have been there was a deep pit.)

"It's ever so much better now, he assured me. "They are already doing skin grafts."

"Well, I knew I'd had it. But still had enough strength to pull myself up towards the edge of the half-track and roll off it. I groped for my personal bandage, but it was gone, along with most of my hip. I knew I had to stop the blood so I put my fist right inside the wound. I could feel the smashed bones with my fingers."

"The boys couldn't help me. There were only six of them left. The driver, a second lieutenant, got it in the head. He was gone instantly. The other guy, behind me, was also dead. French Ambassador, Jean Herly, escorted into his residence yesterday by Arigdor Shoham, Chief of the Middle East. (right), and Spas Abu Yisrael Yarkoni, the President's camp. A unit of girl soldiers presents arms.

French want peace for all

Herly, the new French Ambassador to Israel, said yesterday his country desires "lasting peace and security" for all the Middle East. He was speaking in Jerusalem, where he was presented with his letters of credence to President Ezer Weizman. Herly said France regretted all the obstacles that stood in the way of settlement "that would enable Israel to live in peace and security, but our goals are the same."

President Ezer Weizman said Israel would "persist in her tireless search for peace, based on the principles of independence, justice and equality for all the peoples of the region." The President expressed his confidence that France and Israel would strengthen the ties between them, particularly in the areas of cultural, scientific and economic cooperation.

More benefits for single newcomers

The mortgage limit for single young immigrants has been raised from IL18,000 to IL20,000.

The increase is among a series of steps aimed at easing the absorption of young immigrants. The Absorption Ministry is also increasing its supply of subdivided apartments which presently offer accommodation for 1,500 singles. The apartments, with common kitchen and toilet facilities, generally accommodate three persons in separate rooms.

The Ministry aims at a measure of compatibility among the persons sharing an apartment on the basis of age, religious observance, etc.

Single immigrants renting rooms on their own will have up to 90 per cent of the rent subsidized for the first year.

Movies desperate, 50 cinemas face closure

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — If the authorities do not extend immediate financial help to the country's cinemas, they are in danger of closing down for good. This was stated yesterday by Gavriel Mograbi, chairman of the Cinemas Association.

The Association has 245 member cinemas throughout the country. Mr. Mograbi said 50 are in immediate danger of closing. He did not specify what financial aid was demanded, but he did say it was "up to the Government to decide if the cinemas are a vital part of the country's entertainment and culture. If it rules they are as outdated as an icebox, let it say so plainly, and we will close down and look for other sources of income."

He noted that the number of movie-goers since the war broke out was down 50 per cent or more from last year. For example, attendance in October of this year was only 1,220,000, as compared to 2,551,000 in October last year. Figures for November were not yet in, but they were believed to hover around the 50 per cent mark.

Attendance was down, he said, for a simple reason. Most movie-goers were young people. Most of them were mobilized today.

Most of the 50 cinemas facing closure, he said, are in towns and villages where they constituted the "focal point of social gatherings." However, three are in greater Tel Aviv, two in Jerusalem and two in Haifa. The 50 employ some 900 persons of the 2,000 employed in the entire industry.

He said that "with the introduction of television five years ago, the cinemas suffered a severe heart attack. We managed to recover and struggle along at a much slower pace. If the Government wants to save the cinemas from closing, it must consider giving us a financial heart-transplant."

10,000 petition for recognition of Palestinians

TEL AVIV. — Over 10,000 signatures were appended last week to a petition calling on the Government to draw up an immediate plan for peace and to "recognize existence of the Palestinian nation." This was claimed at a press conference here yesterday by the sponsors of the petition, a group calling itself the "Committee for a Peace Initiative—Now."

The group says it has supporters in many political parties, including Labour, Mapam, the National Religious Party, Independent Liberals, Moked, Meri and Sih.

Dr. Dov Sion of the Neguv University said the group represented the broadest common denominator among "all those who believe there is an alternative to the policy that preceded the Yom Kippur war — a policy of stagnation and creeping annexation that precluded any chance for peace."

Jews take time off to work for Israel

More than 30,000 Jews in the United States and other countries left their regular work during the Yom Kippur War to devote their time to collecting money for Israel and to engage in information work, according to Jewish Agency Director-General Moshe Rivlin.

Mr. Rivlin said yesterday that the identity of Diaspora Jewry with Israel during the war surpassed that during the Six Day War. He noted that since Yom Kippur at least one plane load of immigrants has arrived in the country every day.

Seat belt law deferred till April 1, 1974

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Deputy Transport Minister Gad Ya'acobi yesterday presented a bill to the Knesset postponing indefinitely the obligation on drivers to fasten seat belts. But the Economic Committee, which took up the bill after it was passed unanimously on the first reading, decided the obligation must take effect April 1, 1974, unless the Ministry proves the need for another deferment.

Replying to the debate, which covered a range of transport topics other than seat belts, Mr. Ya'acobi said the country would save about 50,000 tons of fuel per annum by keeping vehicles off the road one day a week. The stoppage was justified on political, psychological and economic grounds, he said.

He also said a project would be launched next Sunday to encourage drivers to give lifts to civilians and soldiers alike. Collaborating in the hitch-hike scheme will be Gedna youth corps volunteers, petrol stations, the Transport Ministry, the Prime Minister's Office, the National Road Safety Council and other bodies.

Borough system broached again for Jerusalem

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The division of Jerusalem into 10 boroughs, each with some measure of self-government, has been proposed by the Independent Liberal candidate for Mayor, Uri Huppert.

In his proposal, outlined last week to the party's executive, Mr. Huppert suggests that each borough elect three representatives to an overall Municipal Council, which would be headed by a Mayor chosen in direct elections. (The 31-member council would be the same size as the existing council.)

Mr. Huppert does not spell out the powers the boroughs would have. He says, however, that the Arab population would have its borough affairs run by its own elected officials.

Mayor Teddy Kollek and City Councilman Mevor Ben-Zur have in the past raised the possibility of a borough system in Jerusalem, but their Alignment party has never acted on it.

Closing of Schoenau cramps Lod

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Immigrant facilities at Lod Airport, which can barely cope with the present rate of immigration, are to be burdened considerably by the closure of the Schoenau immigrant camp in Austria, according to Amos Lavie, deputy Director-General of the Ministry of Immigrant Absorption.

Immigrants used to stay several days at Schoenau. Now their preliminary screening will be shifted to Lod.

The cramped airport facilities, however, are to be curtailed still more in the near future by construction activity at the terminal. Plans have been approved for a special wing for the processing of immigrants, and groundwork has actually begun. But the war will undoubtedly delay its completion well beyond the October, 1974, target date.

Mr. Lavie said the Ministry is trying to persuade airport officials to seal off a section of the departure lounge in order to permit expansion of the present immigration facilities until the new wing is completed.

An Absorption Ministry official said about 98 per cent of immigrants are processed at Lod, and the remainder at Haifa Port.

Fake gold coins in Paris said Soviet-made

By JACK MAURICE
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

PARIS. — French gold experts here believe they have uncovered the biggest counterfeit gold coin traffic in modern history — manufactured by the Kremlin.

In the past year the experts have been worried about the fact that more "Louis d'Or" 20-franc gold coins were being sold in Paris than have ever been minted. As there is a free gold market in Paris where the coin and ingot can be sold freely by a dealer to anybody with enough cash — cheques are not taken — the French invariably hoard gold, preferring the coin.

Last week the "Louis d'Or" reached a record price of 134 francs (over IL140) each, and tens of thousands were purchased privately.

But where did they come from? They should have been minted by French Finance Ministry presses, but experts believe many were minted in the Soviet Union with Russian-made gold.

There are two explanations. One is that, during the last war, the advancing German armies captured French Finance Ministry presses, including those that mint the "Louis d'Or." These presses were in turn seized by Soviet armies in the Third Reich, where they had been taken by the Germans. The presses were then taken to the Soviet Union and never returned.

Another explanation is that Soviet scientists and technicians deliberately built a series of "Louis d'Or" presses on Kremlin orders.

Russian gold production has always been a state secret, but there is no secret about the most profitable way of selling it. If the Russian gold were sold at the official price, it would bring in $42 an ounce. If sold unofficially on a free gold market like Paris, Zurich or Frankfurt, in ingot or bar form — the price would be somewhere in the region of $100 an ounce. But sold as a gold coin, the return is $108 an ounce.

It would be child's play to bring the counterfeit "Louis d'Or" into France by diplomatic pouch, the experts point out.

The French are quite certain that "Louis d'Or" coins are minted in Russia with Russian gold. But so far no official statement has been issued. Once strong Paris-Moscow ties have become fragile lately, and this kind of revelation could cause a public storm and break the ties entirely.

The French man in the street, fiercely anti-Communist, would hate to find out he has been sleeping on a mattress stuffed with Russian gold.

Israeli heads U.S.-Israel education fund

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Keating yesterday appointed an Israeli research scientist as chairman of the U.S.-Israel Education Foundation. He is David Samuel, 51, Sherman Professor of Physical Chemistry at the Weizmann Institute.

This is the first time an Israeli has held the position.

Dr. Samuel replaces William Thompson, who has been reassigned to Washington after four years as cultural affairs officer of the U.S. Embassy.

Since its establishment in 1956, the foundation, which administers the Fulbright-Hays Education Exchange Programme here, has been headed by an American Ambassador. Keating is honorary chairman of the board, which consists of three Israelis and three Americans.

The foundation has awarded grants to 192 Americans and to 337 Israelis for teaching, research and study in the other's country. Upwards of 200 of the returned scholars serve with institutions of higher learning in Israel.

Excess profits tax decied as bad all around

TEL AVIV. — The chairman of the Coordinating Committee of Economic Organizations, Mark Mosesov, yesterday called on Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir not to "impose an excess profits tax. It would bring no income to the Treasury and would only hurt industry," he said in a letter to Mr. Sapir.

Mr. Mosesov noted that "the cost of collecting the tax would exceed income." Such a tax, generally adopted during national emergencies, should be imposed on those plants making "excess profits" working for the war effort, he asserted. But since most of them are state owned, the tax would be imposed only on ordinary industries, slowing down their expansion.

This is the exact opposite of what is good for the country, he held.

He added that the present company tax plus the war bans were now taking more than 85 per cent of profits. Further reducing profits would discourage further investment.

Aussie 'even-handed' policy questioned

By DAVID LANDAU
Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent

A minor political storm has blown up within the ruling Australian Labour Party following outspoken criticism last week of the Government's "even-handed" Middle East policy by trade union leader Robert Hawke. Mr. Hawke, President of the Australian Confederation of Trades Union, spoke out after a two-week visit to Israel and the Soviet Union. While in Israel he met here Premier Golda Meir and other top Labour Party leaders.

"I am in favour of the viability of the State of Israel, which was established in 1947 with the determined assistance of the Australian representative," Mr. Hawke told newsmen. "The Israelis are concerned about their viability. People are trying to destroy them now, and the use of the oil weapon is part of that attempt. I think that we have to respond to that and say 'it's not on.'"

Mr. Hawke said there was a very strong difference of opinion between himself and Prime Minister Gough Whitlam, and he thought his own view was shared by a significant sector of the Australian Labour Party.

He said the Government's official policy of "even-handedness" was "not an intelligent approach. I simply don't know what the phrase means." It was an exercise in naïveté, he continued, to suppose that Australia's economy would be immune simply because it received a pat on the back from the Arabs.

Mr. Hawke earned the praise of "The Herald," the conservative-leaning newspaper which generally supports the opposition Liberal Party. The paper said Hawke's views were "sensible" than the Government's policy. "... We are weak and foolish to kowtow to the Arabs with our declaration of so-called neutrality."

"By our spurious 'even-handedness' we shrink doing what we clearly should do — that is reiterate our determination that Israel must be preserved and that the Arabs in this war are the aggressors. Israel eventually will have to give up its occupied territories. But it cannot accept any redefinition of its borders until it can be absolutely sure of safety. Our model here should be the policy of the U.S. and we should be supporting Washington fully."

"The Herald" wrote.

"The Australian," which is generally sympathetic to the Labour government, argued on the other hand that the even-handed policy was essentially correct — but it was not seen by Jewish and other pro-Israel Australians as in fact even-handed.

In an editorial last week, "The Australian" wrote: "What then does 'even-handed' mean and what should it mean? It does and should mean that Australia supports strongly the right of Israel to exist."

"Any policy must start with this, and Australia's does so by continuing to support the U.N. Resolution 242 which calls on Israel to withdraw from unspecified 'occupied territories' but also affirms Israel's right to exist within established and secured borders."

"Two things are therefore necessary. One is for Mr. Whitlam... to make a clear and concise statement re-emphasizing that, however neutral we are on such matters as the occupied territories, we support Israel's right to exist and oppose any bid to deny that right. The other is for Mr. Hawke to learn to keep his mouth shut."

In an editorial last Saturday, "The Australian" wrote: "What a way to run the world? Must we really accept that the future of Australia and Japan, West Germany and Great Britain will depend on whims of King Faisal and his Gulf colleagues? Oil diplomacy threatens to bring Israel to its diplomatic knees, and there are many who think it is time Mrs. Meir and her government began to make some constructive concessions. But Israel's right to exist is paramount, and in the delicate negotiations ahead, the Canberra Government must not lose sight of that. Even if we Australians have to give up Sunday driving."

THE THREE MILLION WORDS OF HAROLD MACMILLAN

NO British Prime Minister has retired from official life with more style and elegance, nor any public figure ripened into old age as fascinatingly as Harold Macmillan.

He said from the outset that he did not believe in old actors hanging around the Green Room and he didn't. He took no further part in politics and went back to his publishing firm and to his memoirs.

Now the work is complete, three million or so words of it in six volumes, each one launched with carefully planned publicity and each one the occasion for a leisurely and riveting television appearance, the old man sitting in his comfortable lounge at Birch Grove, reminding touchingly, amusingly, often mischievously.

What, one wonders, will later generations make of this fascinating historical material? What, indeed, would we have made of a television film like this of Disraeli or Gladstone or the Duke of Wellington?

Some, no doubt, would have been poor television personalities and disappointed us. But it is unlikely that anyone will ever be disappointed with Macmillan.

He remains to this day the British politician who mastered the medium better than anyone else, and probably no other in the world has used actor and that people refer to him now as the old entertainer. He is an actor. What successful politician is not?

But combined with the acting was a political skill and an intellectual quality and far-sightedness that in years to come may put him historically alongside and even ahead of the man he most admired — Churchill.

Churchill had the fortune to come to power at a time that required uncomplicated qualities — enormous drive, energy and resource and a patriotic fervour. The requirements of Macmillan's age were quite different. He was Premier when Britain's role in the world was changing dramatically and yet not in a way that could appeal to the basic national instincts of a people.

Britain was moving out of the world power class into the ranks of the medium powers.

Macmillan saw that. He took over in the aftermath of Britain's last imperial fling — Suez — and he had to manoeuvre and pilot the country into major decisions without actually appearing to do so.

He was exactly the right man for the job. His appearance and his delivery gave the impression of a man of inaction and almost Victorian outlook.

Yet he was the total opposite. He believed the point of being in office was to take big decisions — and this he did. It was Macmillan who first put in Britain's application to join the European Economic Community, one of the most important British political acts for centuries. It was Macmillan who decided to take Britain out of Africa.

To try to obtain some of these larger objectives he used all the methods of the wily politician. He was more often than not a case of the ends justifying the means.

To Macmillan it was the end that really mattered. In the last remarks of his last television appearance on the last volume of his memoirs, he defined "the purpose for which we were sent here" in this way:

"To bring about, stage by stage, an improvement and an aspiration to the Utopia which we know can never come, but which we must never cease to search for."

This, above all, was at the heart of the Macmillan philosophy, the philosophy behind the actor, the creed by which he abided.

In a few months, on February 10, Macmillan will be 80 and almost certainly will be on stage again. Old men can be boring, but Macmillan is the exception.

URGED NIXON TO START GAS RATIONING S. energy chief resigns after using 'to hold down the doom'

WASHINGTON — John DeLoach, energy adviser to President Richard Nixon, resigned today after a long and bitter battle with the administration over the proposed gas rationing program.

DeLoach, who had been in the White House since 1969, was one of the most powerful men in the Nixon administration. He was a close confidant of the president and had been instrumental in the development of the energy crisis.

DeLoach's resignation was announced by a spokesman for the White House. The spokesman said that DeLoach had been in the White House for over three years and had been instrumental in the development of the energy crisis.

DeLoach's resignation was a surprise to many observers. He was widely regarded as one of the most powerful men in the Nixon administration. He was a close confidant of the president and had been instrumental in the development of the energy crisis.

At the same time, he said in a broadcast interview: "In wishing Mr. Simon well, let me indicate that I think that this is going to be a problem and a job that will chop up a good many people before it's finished."

In a copyrighted story, the "Denver Post" said Love had become frustrated about his role. "To be honest," he was quoted as saying, "it's difficult to try to do anything meaningful and even get the attention of the President."

Love, who resigned as Governor of Colorado at Nixon's request to take the job in July, offered to "assist the development of a new administration in any way possible."

The main chosen by President Nixon to be the new U.S. energy chief is a Wall Street millionaire, William E. Simon, 46, who has served as Deputy Secretary of the Treasury for one year.

As a senior partner in Solomon Brothers, one of Wall Street's most powerful investment houses, Simon was considered a brilliant trader and emerged as a leading spokesman for the securities industry.

He was estimated to be earning as much as $3m. a year, when he joined the administration at an annual salary of $46,000.

In Memphis, Tennessee, on Monday, U.S. Senator J.W. Fulbright said the U.S. must either support demands that Israel return captured Arab lands or face an extended depression resulting from oil shortages.

In Washington, Sen. Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.) demanded on Monday that the U.S. sever trade relations with the U.S.S.R. until the Arab oil embargo against the U.S. is ended.

Introducing a resolution to that effect, Schweiker declared that the "Soviet Union could end the Arab oil embargo tomorrow if they wanted to. I think we should make them want to."

In New York, Saudi Arabia's Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, arrived on Monday to start a tour expected to include talks with officials of the Arabian American Oil Company (Aramco).

Yamani and Saudi Foreign Affairs Minister Nouri Ibrahim were met at Kennedy International Airport by Secret Service agents and executives of the oil company. He refused to answer newsmen's questions.

The oil minister was expected to travel to Washington today, and was scheduled to appear on Sunday on the CBS television show "Face the Nation."

HOLLAND CALLS FOR SHARING

Holland asked its common market partners for a "proportional sharing" of the oil crisis, but got no immediate response.

British Minister for Europe, John Davies, said the ministers agreed only to "continue consultation," despite the growing gravity of the oil situation.

Britain and France argue that the community should take no spectacular action that could upset the delicate political climate in advance of the Middle East peace conference scheduled for December 18 in Geneva.

At the same time, they also fear that a strong display of solidarity among the nine, particularly in favour of Holland.

expects a proportional sharing of the burden," the minister said.

"The longer the scarcity continues, the more urgent Community action becomes," he added.

BOUMEDIENNE THREAT 'Oil catastrophe if West attacks'

ALGIER (AP). — President Houari Boumedienne says that attempts to use force to get Arab oil would meet only with disaster, since workers could set fire to the wells and destroy the pipelines.

At a press conference for newsmen from Lebanese and Egyptian newspapers on Monday, Boumedienne said in reply to a question about threats to use force: "We do not need armies or tanks to defend our oil, because it would be enough for a small number of our citizens to provoke a world catastrophe in case the Western powers were headstrong. I would even say that if the West tries to act with arrogance and to use force, it would suffer a catastrophe. Every oil pit will be set on fire, all the pipelines will be destroyed, and the West will pay the price."

Pioneer passes Jupiter, survives radiation belt

MOUNTAIN VIEW, California (UPI). — America's Pioneer 10 spacecraft survived Jupiter's dangerous radiation belt and swept past the giant planet on Tuesday in the triumphant highlight of a space odyssey which began nearly two years ago.

The unmanned spacecraft, travelling faster than any man-made object ever has, accomplished an historic rendezvous with Jupiter Monday night after a 21-month, 990-million-km. space journey. Pioneer reached its target point 130,000 km. above the planet and then swung behind Jupiter's Moon 10 and began its outward bound voyage to even more remote planets.

Scientists at the Ames Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (Nasa) said the closer Pioneer got to Jupiter, the stronger the radiation belt became, and the craft pulled away just in time. A spokesman said it had passed to a point of "near saturation."

The radiation levels were hundreds of times stronger than could be tolerated by man, and scientists had said there was danger to the craft.

On Pioneer's success, project manager Charles M. Hall quipped, "As Caesar said: 'We came, we saw, we conquered.'"

As a result of the fly-by, Hall told newsmen, "We are able to penetrate these radiation belts and begin to use Jupiter as a means of getting to the outer planets in simple fashion."

Another official said Pioneer "has survived. We are on the way out."

Pioneer will cross the orbits of Saturn, Neptune, Uranus and Pluto before finally escaping the solar system in 1986. Its radio will die in 1977.

Information from the spacecraft will be used to shape the voyage of its sister ship, Pioneer 11, already in flight.

When Pioneer 10 leaves the solar system, it theoretically will travel in space for eternity.

Losses predicted for Danish left as nation polls

COPENHAGEN. — Danes voted in large numbers yesterday in national elections to decide whether to maintain old-line policies and politicians, or switch to untied and radical anti-tax candidates. Opinion surveys have predicted heavy losses for socialist Premier Anker Joergensen's party.

The polls foreshadow a fragmented parliament with as many as 10 of the 11 national parties getting the necessary two per cent to qualify for representation. The vote for the Prime Minister's Social Democrats may fall below 23 per cent, and even with their left-wing allies the combined vote will not reach 30 per cent, according to the polls.

It is predicted that the anti-tax parties will get 25 per cent of the votes.

Observers believe the inconclusive result may mean consultations so prolonged that Denmark may have only a "caretaker" administration when Common Market heads of government convene here for their conference next week.

Fire damages Only Airport

PARIS (Reuter). — Over 300 firemen last night finally put out a tenuous blaze which raged for hours through four floors of Orly Airport, causing extensive damage.

Airport officials said about one-quarter of the main terminal, Orly Sud, was destroyed in the fire, which followed an explosion in the aircraft maintenance section.

The officials said the fire spread first through plastic piping from the basement upwards and then through the air conditioning system.

Air traffic was switched to Orly's west terminal, used normally by only four airlines. About 44 airlines are now working from the terminal, and officials said they could not guarantee that all flights would operate as scheduled. The authorities were not yet able to give an estimate of the damage, nor could they say when Orly Sud would be back in working order.

Mengele suspect: check on body

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP). — A Brazilian newspaper said yesterday that police in neighbouring Paraguay plan to send the fingerprints of a recently slain German-born farmer to West Germany and to Jewish Nazi hunters in Vienna, to see if he was fugitive concentration camp head Joseph Mengele.

Rio's "O Globo" said two of its reporters got the information in the Paraguayan town of Pedro Juan Caballero, across the border from Brazil, where the killing occurred.

The victim — identified variously as Albert Frederick, Awbert Frederick and Albert Frederick — was beaten to death last week in his farmhouse, according to newspaper reports in the far western Brazilian state of Mato Grosso.

The killers were Israeli commandos who believed the man was Mengele, these stories claimed.

The dead man's widow was quoted as saying the notion that her husband was Mengele was "ridiculous."

The widow said the killers were simply "robbers," and that she planned to leave Paraguay as soon as the police rule the case closed.

Mrs. Allende gets U.S. visa

WASHINGTON (AP). — The U.S. has issued a visa to Mrs. Salvador Allende, widow of the former President of Chile, State Department sources said yesterday.

A temporary tourist visa was issued to Mrs. Allende, and she is expected to arrive any day, the officials said.

Mrs. Allende was bitterly critical of the U.S. following the ouster of her husband's government in a military coup, claiming Washington was responsible for his downfall.

Since the coup, she has visited Mexico and Europe and is now said to be in Canada.

A radio broadcast in Santiago yesterday quoted a Chilean spokesman as saying the U.S. decision to extend the visa was deplorable as Mrs. Allende "is a woman who is discrediting her own country."

Crew abandons ship in Atlantic

NEW YORK (AP). — About 30 crewmen abandoned a Cypriot cargo ship in the Atlantic yesterday, the Coast Guard said.

A Coast Guard aircraft sighted life rafts in the water about three kilometres from the cargo ship, which was riding low in the water about 240 kms. southeast of New York.

Three coast guard cutters were en route to the scene last night, and a helicopter was also dispatched to drop radio equipment to the life rafts.

The ship, en route from St. George, Newfoundland, to Savannah, Ga., was an unidentified cargo, radioed an SOS yesterday, saying it was taking water and that the crew was abandoning ship. It was spotted about five hours later.

Austria appeals to Soviets on re-entry visas for Jews

VIENNA (AP). — Austria is continuing its appeal to Soviet officials in Moscow and Vienna to permit faster entry of Russian Jews stranded in Vienna upon their return from Israel, Foreign Minister Rudolf Kirchschlager said yesterday.

The Foreign Minister was commenting on an incident at the Soviet consulate here on Monday in which several Jewish families refused to leave the premises until their demand for Soviet re-entry visas was met.

After several hours of fruitless bargaining, police were summoned to the consulate by Soviet staff members. They cleared the premises of the protesters without having to resort to violence.

Some of the demonstrators have been applying for Soviet visas for three years, a Jewish spokesman said. Several applicants have been issued valid papers in the past. But the protesters said Soviet authorities have been dragging their feet.

Mr. Kirchschlager said the Austrian Government, aware of this "deeply human problem," was in contact with Soviet authorities in an effort to speed up the return of the Jews.

Jewish emigrants forfeit Russian citizenship and their passport as they leave the Soviet Union.

HOME SEES GROMYKO

MOSCOW. — Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the British Foreign Secretary, yesterday completed talks with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and met with President Podgorny, the top agency said.

British diplomatic sources said that Anglo-Soviet relations, damaged by the spy scandal and expulsion of more than 100 Soviet diplomats from Britain two years ago, were the main topic of Sir Alec's talks with Gromyko. The Middle East situation and European security were also discussed.

The diplomats stressed that Sir Alec's visit came at the initiative of the Russians.

Soviet blames oil firms

(UPI). — Soviet news-erday rejected as "habitual Western suggestions" that a hand in the West's oil crisis, while endorsing the Arab decision to impose a strict oil embargo on South Africa and warned that such a move would hit black the hardest.

THE HAGUE. — Premier Joop den Uyl said yesterday he estimated that supplies of oil to the Netherlands had dropped by 30 per cent and might drop further.

KUWAIT. — Arab oil ministers will hold a meeting here on Saturday to discuss implementing resolutions on the oil weapon, adopted at last week's Arab summit conference.

U.S. Red Sea moves attacked

CAIRO (Reuter). — The newspaper "Al Ahran" said yesterday that the presence of warships of the U.S. Seventh Fleet close to the Bab el-Mandeb Straits is a provocation to the peoples of the area and a threat to their security.

In an editorial, the paper said it was difficult to consider the moves of the Seventh Fleet at Bab el-Mandeb, as separate from the presence of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

The paper warned that U.S. "attempts to break up the Arab ranks are doomed to failure."

Chile's junta forces out Swedish envoy

SANTIAGO (AP). — Chile's military government declared Swedish Ambassador Harald Edelstam persona non grata yesterday in a move that will force the controversial diplomat to leave the country immediately.

Edelstam, a 60-year-old career diplomat, angered the ruling junta by forcefully defending political refugees who sought asylum after the coup against Marxist President Salvador Allende last September.

Refugee migration to Europe urged

AMSTERDAM (INA). — Three political parties, all members of the governing majority, have urged Western Europe to encourage the immigration of Palestinian refugees into their countries.

During a parliamentary debate on foreign policy, spokesmen for the parties said the Netherlands and its Western European partners should admit and grant citizenship to large numbers of Palestinian refugees.

The three parties are the Roman Catholics, the Political Radicals and the "Democrats 66."

Sakharov's wife refuses KGB order

MOSCOW (AP). — Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov said yesterday that his wife was summoned for another interrogation by the secret police but refused to comply with the order.

Sakharov also said there has been no official response to his request for permission for himself and his family to visit the U.S. He applied for the exit visas following a summer-long government press campaign against him.

World stock markets down after war and energy crisis: Will the slump continue?

and stock markets have fallen since the Yom Kippur war and the oil supply created a shiver in Europe and, so, in the United States. Large share prices on all markets are fluctuating at their lowest levels for years. At 20-35 per cent less than the highest prices recorded in 1973, in a period of barely 18 months, the London Stock Exchange has lost 15 per cent, New York 15 per cent, Amsterdam 14 per cent. Categories, such as oil and amusement stocks such more in Frankfurt price drops were less upward from its present low levels? More simply, is it time to join the nervous sellers or are present bargain prices an indication that one should start buying? The largely depends upon one's opinion as to the extent of real damage to the economies of the United States, Japan and Western Europe. One widely held view is that the Arab oil policy marks the end of an epoch of almost continuous growth and expansion of production in the Western world — in various degrees in different countries of course. A well-known Dutch economist, responsible for the holdings of one of the larger investment com-ward move in New York more drastic since after an October, prices fell continuously for several famous Dow Jones index, and 1050 this year, tumble well below 825. And, nobody knows when the trend will stop. As for the 30 shares which average $100 a share to this year, those first class stocks are today selling at times their annual earnings are an unprecedented low.

Because of this international price fall is, of course, sudden hostilities in the East, followed by the constant oil restrictions which strangle Europe and Japan of oil sources of energy to wheels of industry going.

It is question which poses the question, will the price continue to move downward or will it sooner or later turn panies, declared recently that the whole Western economy is tottering. Not only is rising more limited, but its price is rising steeply. Companies and industries can be expected for other raw materials which producers copy the Arab oil sheiks and form a united front. This situation could continue at least until 1980, as before that no alternative sources of energy can be expected to become available in sufficient quantities. In addition, scarcity of raw materials will induce governments to strengthen their grip on the economy, which never augurs well for future profits.

On the other hand, the manager of the well-known Robeco group of investment trusts managing about $3,000 million, thinks that the present low prices had already discounted a lot of future bad news. He does not advise buying immediately, but adds that the United States is a good place to buy, many stocks available at what appear to him attractive, in some cases even bargain prices.

SCANNING DEVICE FOR THE BRAIN

By JOHN LESAR

CHICAGO (UPI). — A new scanning device is giving doctors a three-dimensional view of the human brain and helping surgeons make more precise operations of brain disorders, the president of Chicago Medical Centre said.

Preliminary results at our medical centre and two other institutions in the United States and three in England and Canada suggest that the technique could have major impact on the health care of patients by reducing costs, risks and time of hospitalization for patients undergoing brain surgery," Dr. James A. Cummins, president of Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Centre, said in a news release. The Centre is the third largest institution in the United States to put the new $350,000 computerized brain-scanning device into use.

The new brain scanner is one of the most revolutionary technical advances in medical science. Wilhelm Röntgen discovered X-rays in 1895.

Doctors can determine the depth of a tumour, detect abnormal enlargements of the brain's ventricles and make other highly refined distinctions concerning brain tissues, he said.

"In some cases the new machine can provide more information than can be extracted from any other imaging technique," Euckman said.

"In others, it can provide the same information as the more time-consuming, complicated tests." The brain scanning test requires only 30 minutes and does not require hospitalization, as do some other brain tests.

"Because of its sensitivity, it is hoped that the new instrument will enable more precise pre-operative distinction between various types of brain pathology — malignant and non-malignant tumour, abscesses, cysts, strokes and other effects from arteriosclerosis, haemorrhages resulting from accidents and some birth defects — without risk, expense and time associated with other diagnostic techniques," Euckman said.

EASIER LIFE FOR THE FABRIC-HUNTER

By CATHERINE ROSENHEIMER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The range of locally-produced upholstery and curtaining fabrics is gradually expanding and improving. However, Israeli-made selections of printed curtaining are still limited, and I recently conducted a search for what I had thought would be a simple matter: a length of perfect-plain, chocolate brown furnishing fabric. Striped, checked or mottled browns were to be found in abundance, but plain — quite impossible.

Nonetheless, life is becoming a little easier for the fabric-hunter. For example, a severely plain, chocolate brown, comprehensive range of "ready-mades" on the local market about six months ago. Initially the range comprised printed and plain curtaining, bedspreads and cushions. According to owner Jack Messer, Israeli housewife-hand caught up in the fashion style has a lot of buying ready-to-hang curtains thetic lightweight fabric — it looks like the traditional net curtaining and are available in many different colours, both strong and pastel shades. Best for bedroom or kitchen use, the new ready-made comes complete with adjustable hooks, either plastic or stainless steel. A complete set of curtains and tracks ranges in price according to size of course, from IL75 to IL293.

Another new line in furnishing fabrics is heavyweight, curtaining now being woven by Carmel Carpet as part of a programme to extend their range to cover all furnishing materials. The new "woven drapes" style, the bold patterns being internal part of the weave, are overprinted. There are eight different patterns in six colour ways, and prices range from IL40 per metre up to IL70. There are also plain colour fabrics woven by Carmel Carpet. They are claimed to be sun-resistant, and washable at home.

Importers to stop bringing timber, cement

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 LAFA. — The major importer of building materials has decided to suspend orders for timber and cement, The Post learned yesterday. It is expected that imports will be halted for at least three to four months, in view of the recession in construction since the war. Large quantities of these materials are in stock, and these are apparently sufficient to last for some time. The suspension of imports will considerably ease the pressure on the ports.

Small car sales soaring in U.S.

DETROIT (AP). — Elevated fuel price prominence by the fuel shortage, the small car accounted for nearly one-third of all autos that rolled off U.S. production lines last month.

Small-car production jumped to 27.7 per cent of the total November output, up from 26.2 per cent in November 1972. The shift came at a time — early in the model year — when Detroit has generally emphasized output of the standard-size car, but it was only a hint of what was to come. This month's auto makers are under a major curtailment of larger car production and are getting ready to shift several assembly lines to the small car.

Friday. The companies were warned that failure to comply with the demand would result in total

Zaire taking over foreign businesses

KHASA (UPI). — The Zaire Government has ordered an inventory to be made of all business enterprises in the country run by foreigners, the first steps to implementation of domestic nationalization of foreign trade.

Falkland and Portuguese business enterprises in Belgium are to keep them going. They are taken over by Zaire within 90 days after December 31, the Government said.

These were the first steps to implement the decision, announced by President Mobutu November 30, to nationalize completely the country's economic and foreign trade.

(AP). — The stock market was rebounding yesterday morning and an afternoon fading under selling pressure.

The Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks closed down 3.31, at 803.21.

Cause renewed buying, some brokers said the market was rebounding off the Dow's 800 level. They said 800 was a psychological barrier to the market's downward drift of recent days.

An appeal to good sense

IT is a sign of changed times, of the enhanced sense of civic duty, that a passionate appeal to "the industrialists and industrial workers in Israel" has been made by the President of the Manufacturers' Association concerning matters which have little to do with business activity.

The page-long advertisement published in yesterday's newspapers reflects Mr. Mosevics' concern about the very basis of our economy, the nation's stamina, morale, and resolve to maintain a stand against sustained enemy pressure.

Mr. Mosevics does not indulge in fine phrases. He makes a dozen practical suggestions directed to his fellow-industrialists and their employees, which range from giving large lifts and economic lighting, to helping plants left without managers now in the army, use of weekends for volunteer farm work, a nine-hour workday, with the additional earnings used to assist the families of those called up.

By pointing out that we can rise to the challenge of this grave hour only by changing our way of life, by disregarding convenience for the sake of productivity, saving, and mutual aid, he is of course voicing evident truths. And it is to be hoped that this appeal will be widely heeded, that citizens will stop relying in every respect on state assistance and administrative controls, and will begin to help themselves and their fellow creatures as best they can.

It is however also symptomatic of the current confused state of our public affairs that such an appeal has come from a relative outsider instead of from the accredited leadership that one looks in vain for public initiatives to make the practical adjustments needed in our changed circumstances. Despite all the talk about emergency, state and municipal departments are still being conducted on a business-as-usual basis, and it is that they tend to be initiated by private concerns.

Nor have we seen public figures giving a personal example by volunteering or reducing their living standards. Despite the labour shortage there has been no attempt to organize self-help in neighbourhoods for such practical jobs as, say, street cleaning. Nor has anything been done to stagger business hours in order to reduce traffic peaks and make better use of the buses available or to adjust shopping hours to the needs of working housewives.

Even such a trifle as the introduction of daylight saving time is not yet in sight, and it is by now clear that in most cases the one-day ban on private driving will be carried out at the expense of business, not of pleasure.

It is little wonder that changes involving more inconvenience are not proceeding at all, and as a result a gap is developing between the men at the frontlines and those of us at home, generating grievances and undermining national morale.

Mr. Mosevics' appeal is therefore a timely, indeed an urgent, reminder that something ought to be done, and quickly.

Dry Bones

ISRAEL PRESS

Conditions for renewing the talks

Ha'aretz (Non-party) says that while Egypt cannot be forced to resume the talks, Israel is right in making their resumption conditional on new proposals by the Egyptians. The present demand for "significant withdrawals" is unacceptable and only goes to prove once again that the Egyptian leadership misinterprets the Kissinger agreement or wants to wrest from Israel what the agreement does not call for.

Ha'aretz (National Religious) dwells on the one-sidedness of the Egyptian demands, saying that the Kissinger agreement embodies the principle of mutuality, and this indeed is what Israel proposes in the way of troop pullbacks on either side. Al Hamishmar (Mapam) says the Israeli offer of a mutual withdrawal of forces in the Canal zone may well meet both Egyptian and Israeli demands. Moreover, rather than blocking negotiations at Geneva or making them superfluous, it will indeed pave the way for them. Hamodia (Agudat Yisrael) says that neither the outcome of the war nor the resolutions by the U.N. Security Council justify the Egyptian demands. Not even those elements in Israel which have been calling for a restoration of captured territories are prepared to have Egyptian missiles within range of our borders.

THE WAR COST WILL LEAD TO A DIFFERENT ISRAEL

THE Day of Judgement War has been the most difficult of Israel's wars and the longest of them except for the War of Independence. Now when we come to sum up the financial costs of the war we perceive that the estimates given by the heads of the Finance Ministry at the outset of hostilities are quite outdated. The new outlay must cover renewal of military equipment, ammunition, spare parts, fuel and supplies as well as payments to families of the reservists apart from the losses incurred to the economy due to mobilization.

None of us are yet cognizant of the true burden of this cost. Most of the outlay came from stock. This was accumulated in the past six years when the country devoted one-quarter of its GNP to defence, much of which went towards arms purchases, equipment and reinforcing border strongholds. The renewal of stock plus the extra purchases which will be found necessary will confront the economy with demands unforeseen until a few weeks ago.

Naturally, one takes into account the nature of the cease-fire, which necessitates the continued call-up of reserves. Even if the cost of the arms airlift is indeed to be covered in part by an American Government grant, such as World Jewry enables the United Jewish Appeal and Bonds to surpass their records, even if the Voluntary War Bond Loan drive passes the planned ILL,000m. target plus the ILL,000m. from the Compulsory War Bond — we will still have to shoulder additional burdens, at least in local currency.

Mutual aid

During the war we witnessed a remarkable spectacle of effective cooperation and mutual aid in all fields. The financial field emerged as the most effective of them all.

It is not true that the enormous quantities of sophisticated Soviet arms are provided to the Arab states free, as many Israelis think. On the contrary, the Soviet Union has made arms exports one of the more remunerative branches of its economy. After 50 years of Communism, the Soviet Union still lags behind in agriculture and requires imports from the West to avoid food shortages. Thus we see the chain of events: the West pays the Arab States good money for oil, and this money finances Arab armaments, while the income from Soviet arms sales to the Arabs pays for grain imports from the West to Russia.

We, on the other hand, are aided by world Jewry and the U.S. Government in financing our outlay in foreign currency. This aid is mostly in credits which we pay back year after year, both capital and interest. Our expenditure in local currency, which has so far been the same as in foreign exchange, is financed by taxation or loans, meaning deferred payment of these debts.

The scope of the expected defence expenditure and the mobilization of a large part of the labour force obliges Israeli society and the economy to deploy their resources in a different manner to that which prevailed before Yom Kippur.

Transport and labour

The bottleneck of the economy is twofold — transport and manpower, despite the Government's purchase of 2,000 trucks for an emergency reserve. It was this reserve that a similar breakdown in food supplies during the war.

The short-term danger awaiting us is the partial paralysis of economic activity, non-fulfilment of export orders, a delay in readying immigrant absorption facilities, and a lack of capacity to meet the already considerable defence orders.

We have to beware of medium-range hazards, especially the danger of rampant inflation with all that it involves. On no account must we base our policy on what happened after the Six Day War. Even then the defence budget expanded greatly, reaching five times the previous amount. But then we were able to release the reserves very quickly and the economy entered a period of maximum activity, fed by productive factors that had been unemployed before that war, because of financing problems.

No one knows the economic cost of the October war, but it is certain to cost more than the combined total raised by world Jewry, the proposed U.S. grant, and the Voluntary and Compulsory War Bond Loans, writes Knesset Member ADIEL AMORAL. Mobilization alone costs some IL35-40m. a day. The Government must encourage labour mobility and suitable retraining; and a change in the economic structure of the country is required.

War economy

Today we are in a situation where defence outlay is much higher, the reserves are still mobilized and the economy is moving into action at a time when it is in the grip of inflation at an annual rate of 20 per cent.

When the fighting stopped we heard two extremist proposals — one which called for a war economy, i.e., a totally organized economy directed by a planning headquarters to replace the play of the market. The other proposal — coming from manufacturers — urged the Government to finance and underwrite the production of commodities in all branches. The latter proposal means "business as usual," with the Government providing the underpinning until the crisis is over.

To my mind the thinking behind both proposals is mistaken. I do not doubt that a kind of consumer strike against the produce of a certain industry, under present circumstances, is a passing phenomenon. But the supposition that we can return to conditions of the consumer society we were before Yom Kippur is a great mistake. The Government is in duty bound to change this concept in a radical manner.

It is the Government's task to restrict conspicuous private consumption and direct the production factors to providing defence supplies. However, as we must achieve a speedy return to keeping the wheels of the economy moving, the Government must restrict its direct intervention mainly to three spheres: firstly — the release of essential labour, which in turn will enable other workers to start producing; secondly — ending of the transport bottleneck; and thirdly — easy credit facilities. This will involve granting credit on preferential terms to essential branches of the economy, and unlimited credit for whoever wishes to manufacture at his own risk. In this way the Government will reserve preferential credit for essential areas and keep it from non-essential industries and thereby aid the former in getting capital and manpower. Elsewhere the free market mechanism should operate — without any Government curbs — and the entrepreneurs are likely to see to the revival of their businesses much better than any administrative office. As for the commercial banks, their demands for guarantees should be directed to the manufacturers themselves.

New investment

Thus the Government should encourage the expansion of, and new investments in firms which will now produce for the defence establishment. The authorities must release vehicles and foremen for the renewal of public housing — for immigrants, young couples and slum clearance. It may be assumed that manpower will be available from the territories, and the renewal of this major economic activity will be of the greatest significance.

Priority must be given in every way possible to production for export. The non-fulfilment of orders could well ruin markets which it took many years to build up, and income from exports should be the mainstay of our defence expenditure. Further challenges.

Readers' letters

Rabbi Hachohen replies

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — I can well understand Rabbi Dolgin's feelings of discomfort when he read my admittedly grave charges against the religious Establishment of which he is a leader (Readers' Letters, November 21). One might have expected that, in his reply, he would have either apologized for any failings or, if he did not believe my accusations justified, he would have refuted them.

It is to be regretted that, instead, Rabbi Dolgin attempted to blur the facts and translate failures into "magnificent achievements." In my interview with The J.P. on November 16, I refrained from mentioning most of the shortcomings of the religious Establishment during the war.

I repeat my basic charge that more than 80 per cent of the press releases put out by the Establishment at its various levels were inconsistent with the facts and resulted from a desire for personal publicity. They forgot that while the people of Israel fought for survival, the Establishment should not have continued to act as though times were normal.

Of course, I never included in my strictures the thousands of religious Jews in the front lines and on the home front who sanctified all that is holy with a supreme devotion which will become part of our national legends. That I have repeated and I emphasize once again on this occasion. My criticism was aimed only at the religious officialdom.

The Director-General of the Ministry of Religious Affairs claims that the rabbis were "not seeking to be civilians on the battlefield where they were not permitted..." I would like to ask him whether the Army prevented these rabbis from coming to Kiryat Simona, Metulla, Migdal, Haifa, and other towns and villages that were bombed and shelled? To the best of my knowledge, not one member of the Chief Rabbinate Council nor any other leading religious figure bothered to visit any of these places during war time.

Most of the country's rabbis did not bother to include themselves in the deputations that brought the terrible tidings to the bereaved families. I have a list of well-known rabbis who actually refused to join such deputations when official approaches were made to them. It may be true that a distinguished few did engage in this sacred task, but the exception highlights the rule.

Rabbi Dolgin claims that, since the war, 350 Tora scrolls were handed over to the fighting units; why then did the official announcement at the outbreak of war claim that 1,000 scrolls were handed over to the units?

Rabbi Dolgin claims that his Ministry distributed over 40,000 religious items. I stand by my criticism of the lack of such supplies during the war and I permit myself to cast doubt on this number which has the authenticity of the news on the 1,000 scrolls.

Rabbi Dolgin admonishes me: "As rabbi of the moshavim, Rabbi Hachohen might have done well to be with his people in this trying time..." I would like to inform him that I did exactly that in the following moshavim: Kfar Yuvval Kadesh, Naf-tali, Dover, Aviram, Zeraim, Netuah, Even-Menahem, Ramot, El Al and Givat Yoav. I am sorry to report that, in these moshavim, none of the local rabbis appointed by the Ministry of Religious Affairs were to be found during the war.

Rabbi Dolgin further attacks me on the ground that "unlike Rabbi Hachohen, rabbis would have objected to the desecration of the day by TV cameramen photographing the hakofot..." I regret to disappoint him, but the hakofot on the TV screen were shown on a small screen placed not on Simhat Tora, but on Hosha-na Rabbah. As I sought to include as many soldiers in front-line units as possible in the rejoicing, I advanced the hakofot by one day.

In conclusion I must reiterate that there were many instances of heroism, ~~bravery~~ <sup>bravery</sup> and acts of courage in the field of religion during the war, but they did not reach public knowledge because they were not done for that purpose.

NO TIME FOR RECRIMINATIONS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — We could not agree with you more, Fay and Joe Isaacs (Readers' Letters, November 20). You have entirely echoed our thoughts. Our struggle still continues and it is not a time for recriminations: our men at the front know the priorities, ask them.

NEW GOVERNMENT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — How can Mrs. Minister (November 18) ask us to unite behind a government that made so many obvious mistakes at the cost of our sons, brothers and husbands? Now is perhaps the best time to hold elections. True, none of us feel like it right now, but it may stop the majority of us from once again electing the people who have made so many mistakes in the past.

CALL FOR TOLERANCE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, — It is understandable that some Israelis may take issue with the letter of Anglican Archbishop George Appleton (November 4). However, I feel that they may have overlooked the positive emphasis which the Archbishop wishes to stress, namely, that in his opinion there is real hope now for a peaceful era between Israel and her Arab neighbours based on secure and recognized borders.

I know of no responsible Israeli who is prepared to ignore the claims of "the other side." Our Government has stated over and over again that it is ready to deal with all outstanding problems in direct negotiations.

The status of the church in international affairs is affected by its universal character, with ecclesiastical interests and constituencies both in Israel and in the Arab lands. Though Israelis have every right and duty to interpret events in the light of our national and historic interests, it is not unreasonable to expect others to see the picture from their own perspective. When they are blatantly wrong, we must correct them; when they seek to be "even-handed," we must try to understand them without in any way interfering with their position.

MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT

CARLESS DAY — CHOSEN BY DRIVER

The regulations covering the non-use of vehicles one day a week come into effect on December 16, 1973.

VEHICLES AFFECTED

- Private cars, motorcycles, motor tricycles, and commercial vehicles of gross weight not exceeding 2,500 kg.
- Vehicles to which the regulations do not apply:
  - Israel Defence Forces vehicles, bearing I.D.F. identification marks;
  - Vehicles of the Israel Police, bearing red police registration numbers;
  - Touring vehicles;
  - Ambulances fitted with a siren, fire-fighting vehicles, etc.;
  - Breakdown lorries;
  - Vehicles of disabled persons —
    - who require a vehicle because of leg disablement
    - whose degree of disablement is 60% or more, and whose health is liable to be adversely affected by street traffic.

The vehicle types coming under the regulations are also subject to the regulations in the occupied territories.

CARLESS DAY

The carless day will be Saturday, but if the vehicle owner so wishes, he may choose any other day of the week. Those who choose Saturday as the carless day will be able to use their vehicles Saturday evening (Motz'ei Shabbat). For the other days of the week, the carless day will last 24 hours — from 2 a.m. to 2 a.m.

THE MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT APPEALS TO THE PUBLIC TO CHOOSE SATURDAY AS THE CARLESS DAY.

The carless day for any given vehicle will be the same day every week. The carless day may be changed by application to licensing offices throughout the country. Such applications may be made six months after the carless day has been established, and only once in six months.

CARLESS DAY STICKERS

Carless day stickers will be given out at all post offices throughout the country, December 9 — 14, 1973. These stickers will indicate the day the vehicle owner has chosen as his carless day. The sticker is to be affixed to the right-hand side of the windscreen; owners of vehicles which have no windscreen should stick them to the front mudguard.

Take your vehicles licence when applying for the sticker. A slip identifying the carless day, stamped with the post office stamp, will be attached to the licence. Vehicle owners now serving in the army who are unable to go personally or ask someone else to collect their stickers may apply to their local licensing office at a later date for a sticker.

Disabled vehicle owners who are exempt from observing a carless day will receive through the post a sticker bearing the Hebrew letter "Pei" on a grey background. They need not apply to a post office for this sticker.

Doctors will also observe a carless day. However, the Medical Association will send them a movement permit, enabling them to make journeys on their carless day for the purpose of providing medical attention.

PENALTIES

Vehicle owners using their cars on the carless day are liable to a fine of IL3,000 and/or the withdrawal of their driving licence for a period of three months. Vehicles found to be in use on the carless day will be taken straight to a police station, where they will remain until 8 a.m. the next day. Vehicle owners must remove their impounded vehicles at this time.

These regulations are intended as a means of saving fuel. Observance of the permitted road speeds will also yield a significant saving in fuel. Accordingly, police vigilance in this respect will be intensified.

Any questions regarding these regulations may be addressed to the Liaison Section of the Ministry of Transport, Jerusalem, Tel. 02-233305.
